(SECURITIES FRAUD)

FILED HARRISBURG

JUL 18 2012

MARY E. D'ANDREA, CLERK
~~PER~~ DEPUTY CLERK

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

I. THE DEFENDANT

1. The defendant, Robert G. Bard ("Bard"), was President, managing member, and sole owner of Vision Specialist Group, L.L.C. ("Vision Specialist"), an investment advisor registered in Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Bard completely controlled the operations of Vision Specialist, including making investment decisions for Vision Specialist clients.

II. VISION SPECIALIST

2. Vision Specialist was a company created in December 2004, that was located in Warfordsburg, Pennsylvania, within the Middle District of Pennsylvania. Warfordsburg is a small rural community in Fulton County, and the large majority of Vision Specialist clients lived in and around Warfordsburg and the border regions of Maryland and West Virginia. On May 21, 2009, Bard reported to Pennsylvania regulatory authorities that Vision Specialist had approximately $9 million in client assets under its management with 140 accounts involving between 101 and 250 clients.

3. Vision Specialist marketed itself on the internet and in brochures as a "wealth manager." Bard provided Vision Specialist clients with fee-based investment advisory services, financial planning, and tax preparation services. Vision Specialist clients maintained their own investment accounts with a broker-dealer selected by Bard. Until March 2009, T.D. Ameritrade, Inc., acted as the broker-dealer for Vision Specialist clients. T.D. Ameritrade is located in Omaha, Nebraska, and Bard accessed client accounts using the internet using his computer, laptop, or other computer. T.D. Ameritrade's computer servers are located in Carrollton, Texas, and Jersey City, New Jersey.

4. According to the standard investment advisory agreement signed by the clients, Bard maintained discretionary authority to supervise and direct the investment of assets in the clients' accounts without the need to consult with the client on a transaction-by-transaction basis. Bard, however, agreed to exercise his authority in accordance with the objectives set forth in the clients' profile. Nothing in the advisory agreement allowed Bard or Vision Specialist to omit material information regarding the nature or value of the investments in the clients' accounts or make any misrepresentations to clients. Furthermore, Bard advertised that Vision Specialist employed "sophisticated risk management" and protected its clients from over extending their risk of loss. Many of Vision Specialist clients were elderly, unsophisticated investors with little investment experience, who desired low-risk investments such as money-market funds, interest bearing accounts, or certificates of deposit. Furthermore, Vision Specialist clients were encouraged to destroy their monthly account statements as soon as the new statement arrived because Bard promised to maintain their paperwork in his office.

III. THE SCHEME TO DEFRAUD

5. Bard executed and attempted to execute, a scheme and artifice to defraud numerous clients of Vision Specialist by soliciting and obtaining millions of dollars under false pretenses, by failing to invest the fraudulently obtained funds as promised, and by repeatedly concealing and covering up the fact that he had squandered their investments on risky stocks and other volatile investments.

6. To execute the scheme, Bard represented himself as a deeply religious man of the highest integrity. Vision Specialist clients were never informed, however, that in September 2004, immediately prior to opening up Vision Specialist, Bard was terminated as a stock broker after the brokerage firm he worked for discovered that he had prepared and submitted investment documents that contained forged customer signatures and other irregularities. Nor did Bard inform Vision Specialist clients that the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA"), determined that Bard forged customer signatures and improperly guaranteed investment returns, and that Bard signed an acceptance, waiver, and consent on October 6, 2005, barring his future association with any FINRA member. Nor did Bard inform Vision Specialist clients that he filed a petition for bankruptcy on July 22, 2005 and that he was in bankruptcy court until August 11, 2011, when his personal debts were discharged by order of the bankruptcy court. Rather, Vision Specialist clients were told that Bard had eighteen years of financial success and that they could trust him with their life savings.

7. On numerous occasions, with numerous clients, Bard explicitly agreed to invest his clients' funds in conservative, low-risk investments such as money-market funds, interest bearing accounts, or certificates of deposit. Bard, however, disregarded these clients' wishes and invested their money in high-risk securities such as penny stocks, oil and gas securities, and foreign index funds that suffered enormous declines in value.

8. For example, beginning in September 2006, Bard invested a large number of his clients and millions of dollars of their funds, in L International Computers, Inc. ("L Computer"), a penny stock pink sheet issuer, that was clearly inappropriate for many of Bard's clients who desired low-risk investments. Bard continued to invest his clients' funds in L Computer even after he complained to regulatory authorities that L Computer was a "bogus" company without any product. Between September 2006 and May 2009, Bard's clients lost over $3 million in L Computer as its value dropped to zero.

9. Similarly, Bard invested a large number of his clients and hundreds of thousands of dollars of their funds, in other high-risk securities such as Dune Energy, Inc. ("Dune Energy"), a development stage, independent oil and exploration company, and Advantage Energy Income Fund ("Advantage Energy"), a Canadian oil and gas royalty trust, and emerging market exchange traded funds ("ETF's") such as iShares MSCI Malaysia--an ETF focused on the Malaysian stock market. Bard's clients lost several hundred thousand dollars investing in Dune Energy and Advantage Energy alone.

10. In an effort to conceal the enormous declines in the clients' accounts, to hide investment choices that went against the explicit desires of the clients, and to generate more fees for himself, Bard repeatedly provided clients with false verbal assurances and phony account statements which grossly overstated the values in their accounts. Between July 2006 and August 2009, Bard repeatedly lied to approximately 43 Vision Specialist clients about the value and make-up of their investment accounts.

11. Bard's misrepresentations to his clients took various forms, including, but not limited to: (1) creating and providing clients with what he claimed were simplified statements of account that were in reality, false and inflated; (2) informing clients that their investments were "backed and secured by the full faith of the U.S. government" and guaranteed to earn money; (3) using computer on-line services via the internet, such as Morningstar.com and Smartmoney.com, whose servers were located outside of Pennsylvania, to create false and inflated account information that was provided to clients; and (4) altering actual brokerage statements from T.D. Ameritrade to inflate values and holdings in the clients' accounts. One such piece of false information added to many clients' accounts concerned alleged holdings in a very conservative, low-risk fund trading under the ticker symbol, "TCUUX," which could only be purchased by credit unions and could not even be purchased by individuals. In fact, Bard never purchased TCUUX for any of his clients and he simply fabricated the entry, as well as other information on the account statements to make it appear that the account values had not diminished.

12. After Bard had misrepresented the make-up and values in his clients' accounts, clients suffered more than $2 million in additional losses. During the same time period, Bard generated over $852,000 in fees from all client accounts.
